Classroom teachers have seen how AI can save them time, help differentiate curriculum, and offer just-in-time support to students. Yet this technology also allows students to take cognitive shortcuts through the curriculum educators have spent years carefully creating.

As a current classroom teacher and instructional coach at Hinsdale District 86, Arpan Chokshi experiences the promise and frustration of AI on a daily basis. You will be equipped with practical, concrete strategies to move from feeling overwhelmed by the threat of AI to confidently redesigning your assignments and assessments so AI helps build student thinking instead of replacing it.
